

System Design / Technical Documentation

Technology is constantly changing. The more complex the product or service, the more important it is to provide clear, easy to follow, user information.

On average, our writers have more than 10 years experience in technical writing and system documentation. We pride ourselves on producing original writing that expresses complex technical information clearly and concisely for a variety of audiences, including industries, government agencies, and the general public. Recognizing that a thorough understanding of the subject is integral to good writing, our technical writers and editors work closely with your own in-house staff as well as the technical experts and designers at the original equipment or software manufacturers to produce high-quality, easy to understand documentation.

Our documentation specialists also work extremely well as independent technical writers and can manage your entire documentation process. If technical documentation is not your core activity, it is an ideal activity to outsource. Our technical writers are very comfortable managing the documentation requirements for all or a portion of a given project.

So, whether you want to completely outsource a documentation project or you need short-term staff assistance, Cynthia Farren Consulting has the experienced documentation professionals who can help.